1 Internships, Jobs, and the summer

While I encourage everyone to seek an internship for the summer and get some work experience, not every student has the same goals. Since not everyone has the same goals you’ll get to pick your own prompt among several:

- If you are thinking about doing an internship this upcoming summer and have not found one yet, look for some internships that you might be interested in. If you have some companies in mind, check out their jobs board! If not, perhaps you can use services like Glassdoor, Indeed, and LinkedIn to search for them. Find at least 2 (down from the 3 of Fall semester; I know it’s nearing the end of internship hunting season) job postings that you are interested in and write down the name of the role/position and the information about the role (e.g. role duties, expectations and requirements for the applicant). Try applying for them! Write a sentence or two or more about what interests you about these positions. If you’ve already applied for them, feel free to list them here.
- If you already have an internship lined up or are graduating and have a full-time offer this will work a bit differently. Write about what sort of role it is and how your application-interview-offer process went.
- If you don’t plan on going on an internship, what are your plans for the summer? Is there a particular reason why you don’t want to/can’t? Will your summer plans align with future goals? It’s also totally fine to enjoy your summer on your own terms!

Q: Write your response on Gradescope.
