CONFERENCE WORK MOVES SLOWLY ON FAR EAST TOPICS

DISARMAMENT DELEGATES PASS FROM GENERALITIES TO DETAILS

FRENCH PLAN FOR ARMY LIMIT EXPECTED TODAY

Further Action on American Naval Building Program Also Possible

Washington, Nov. 22.—The negotiations relating to both armament limitation and the Far East moved more slowly today as the attention of the arms delegates passed from general policies to specific details. China's economic embarrassment formed the bulk of the Far Eastern discussion, which resulted in the appointment of sub-committees of the representatives of nine nations to study the whole question of autonomy of the Chinese republic with particular reference to treasury and tax restriction.

Discuss Army Limits

The land armament problem was considered at various informal conferences during the day, and a meeting of the armament committee of the whole was called for tomorrow with the expectation that Premier Briand, of France, would say a last word as to his country's attitude on reduction of armies. It is understood that he expects to bring the question to the point of a formal expression by the conference before his departure for France.

On the side of naval armament, informal exchanges continued between individual delegates and naval experts with an air of growing confidence that details of the American plan, although requiring considerable time for determination, would eventually bring all the powers into agreement.

Naval Plan May Come Up

It is probable that the naval plan may receive consideration at tomorrow's meeting of the five delegations which constitute the armament committee of the whole, but the greater attention is expected to center on land armaments in view of the imminence of M. Briand's departure. It is the preservation of her armies with the moral backing of the principal powers that most interests France at the present stage of the negotiations, and it is known that M. Briand would be pleased to take back to France with him a formal conference endorsement of the position he has taken against material reduction.

The lecture is given under the auspices of the University and will be free to the general public.

SEATS AVAILABLE FOR XMAS SHOWS

Tickets for Itinerary Performances of Opera Will Be Sold Here to Students

SALE TO BE HELD IN UNION LOBBY FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Application blanks may be secured the end of this week for seats in any theater in which "Make It for Two", the 1922 Union Opera, plays during its Christmas tour of the middle west.

Although seats may be secured at the box office of the theaters in the various cities on the opera route, many students desire to secure tickets for the production here in Ann Arbor. In consequence, the Union officials are having regulation blanks printed, and will issue them on Friday or Saturday of this week in the lobby of the Union.

Women of the University may still obtain application blanks at Barbour gymnasium. Each blank bears a number which will entitle the holder to a place in line by preference when an exchange is made at Hill auditorium on Wednesday, Nov. 30.

Yearly members of the Union were issued blanks Monday. Members of the Union who have not obtained tickets by Nov. 29 will have a final chance to get them on that day in the lobby of the Union. The general box office sale at the Whitney theater will open on Dec. 1.

THANKSGIVING DANCE TO BE GIVEN BY W A A

Bring your best girl to the Armory tomorrow afternoon and forget your Thanksgiving homesickness! Music, by "Ike" Fischer, pep, and a booth where it will be possible to buy all kinds of light refreshments — all of these will be present to drive away the blues.

The members of the Women's Athletic association will be hostesses, and they are giving this party with a double purpose in mind. They wish to help make it a pleasant day for those who are obliged to partake of boarding-house turkey instead of the much-longed-for home variety, and they are endeavoring to raise funds for the association in order that it may be able to do its part in giving to the campaign fund for the new women's building.

Tickets are now on sale at Graham's bookstore at $1 a couple, and will also be sold on Thursday afternoon at the door of the Armory.

JOHN M'CORMACK THRILLS HUGE HILL AUDITORIUM CROWD

RECITAL CONSTRUCTED TO APPEAL TO THE MASS OF PEOPLE

IRISH TENOR PROVES AGAIN HIS SUPREMACY

Practically All-English Program Displays Great Interpretative Power of Singer

(By Edmund Thomas)

Typically McCormack, and such as none but he could give, the concert by John McCormack in Hill auditorium last night but proved again the supremacy of the Irish tenor in singing the songs of the people before an auditorium packed and overflowing.

Reaching its climax in the last number, "The Lord Is My Light" by Allitsen, the concert was a continued triumph for the singer and time and again was he brought back to meet the applause. Triumphing not by means of his voice but by a power to reach the hearts of his hearers and touch them, McCormack held his audience through a practically all-English program of songs, with one group of Irish Folk songs in which he did his most perfect interpretative work.

A breath control almost marvelous, a diction in English and French most remarkable among opera singers, and a depth of sentiment and ability to express it, rare in the extreme, were the outstanding features of Mr. McCormack's concert, which, like all of his concerts, was constructed to appeal to the taste of the great mass of people, and, again like all of them, entirely fulfilled its purpose. However, his singing of "L'Alba Separa" displayed that operatic talent which packs the New York Hippodrome every time it is advertised.

As supporting artist, Donald McBeth probably did his best work in "Obertass" by Wieniawski in which he more nearly gave the selection what it deserved interpretatively, letting his technique become subservient to his art. The work of Mr. McBeth is rather immature in its understanding of the requirements of his numbers, while his technique, the factor on which his playing recommended itnkguttlurUnl-oolo.ebeTpSpB

EX-SENATOR BURTON TO SPEAK HERE SATURDAY

Ex-Senator Theodore Burton, of Ohio, who is the second lecturer on the course offered by the University Oratorical association, will deliver an address on "Our Foreign Policy" (with a discussion of the Conference for the limitation of armaments) at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, Nov. 26, in Hill auditorium.

Senator Burton has been regarded as an authority on economics, finance, and taxation questions, resulting from a wide experience from many years in both houses of congress, from a professorship of economics at Oberlin, and as president of the Merchants' National bank of New York City.

Burton is the author of the following books: "Financial Crises and Periods of Industrial and Commercial Depression," "Corporations and the State," and "Some Political Tendencies of the Times and the Effect of the War Thereon."

THANKSGIVING DAY PARTIES BEING PLANNED BY UNION

Special arrangements for the observance of Thanksgiving day are being made by the Union, with two special dances planned during mid-week.

A special matinee dance from 3 to 6 o'clock Thursday afternoon has been arranged for, with the regular Union orchestra playing.

The dance on Thanksgiving eve for which the Engineering society has been given preference will also have the regular features of week-end dances. The ladies' dining room will

Rechlin Will Be Artist At Organ Concert Thursday

Edward Rechlin, organist of Immanuel Lutheran church, New York city, who has won wide recognition as America's foremost interpreter of the works of Bach, will be the first guest on the Twilight Organ series at 4:15 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in Hill auditorium. Besides his organ recital, Mr. Rechlin will take part in the University Thanksgiving service at 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

Mr. Rechlin has appeared in practically all cities in which organs of note exist and has won continual approval from his audiences. He received his early training at the Lutheran Normal school at Addison, Illinois. His early ambition was to be a teacher, but he soon gave this up because of his successful work as a concert organist. Since 1905 he has filled the church position which he now holds in New York city, his duties being interrupted by extended study abroad with such masters as Guilmant and Widor.

DEANS WILL HEAR REPORT ON PRICES

Investigation Committee to Disclose Findings at Conference This Afternoon

RETAIL MERCHANTS OFFER TO RAISE $500 TO AID IN WORK

The committee recently appointed by President Marion L. Burton to investigate living prices in Ann Arbor will make its report this afternoon at a conference of the deans of the University.

No information is at present available as to possible action of the University authorities, except that they will co-operate with the Ann Arbor Chamber of Commerce in thoroughly investigating the situation. In a resolution passed by the retail merchants section of the Chamber of Commerce Monday night it was recommended that the merchants raise a sum of $500 to defray the expenses of such an investigation, provided that the University raise a similar sum.

Ann Arbor merchants feel that University officials are not justified in charging them with asking higher prices than are asked in other cities, and they are willing to give funds to settle the question. "If we are right," said one merchant, "we shall be of service both to Ann Arbor and the University, for the charge of profiteering is detrimental to both. If we are wrong we are willing to take our medicine."

UNION ENTERTAINS WORKERS OF DRIVE FOR LIFE MEMBERS

Archie McDonald, '22L, then gave a short humorous talk, interspersed with some impersonations. Tommy Thomas' orchestra played special music during the course of the evening.

FUNDS FOR COMPLETION OF NEW HOSPITAL NOT AVAILABLE UNTIL 1922

Money for the completion of the new University hospital will not be forthcoming until after the first of the year according to a decision given out by the state administrative board. Three hundred thousand dollars was asked to complete the structure but this is not enough and more is desired. However, at present the state is short of money and the board found that it was impossible to grant more money until 1922.

The University asked for $650,000 yesterday, of which $300,000 was to come from the mill tax fund; $50,000 is desired for the purchase of land and the $300,000 is to go towards the completion of the hospital.

MANY CHANGES AT LANSING URGED BY MYERS IN REPORT

MESSAGE TO GOVERNOR DEPICTS DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS AT STATE SCHOOL

WOULD PUT BOARD OF EDUCATION IN CHARGE

Intelligence Tests Reveal Only 27 Per Cent of Students to Have Normal Minds

Following a week's investigation of deplorable conditions found to prevail at the State Industrial School for Boys at Lansing, Prof. George E. Myers, of the vocational education department, who directed investigations yesterday submitted to Governor Groesbeck a statement of conditions, together with more than a dozen recommendations for improvement, among which it was requested that "to avoid political brawl" the institution be placed under direction of the State Board of Education, in place of its former position as a penal institution.

Make Readjustment Easy

Other changes proposed by Professor Myers were that the institution provide a system of placement and follow up for boys leaving the institution so that they may "readjust themselves to society and become useful, self respecting citizens".

Regarding vocational education it was stated that out of the 512 boys in the institution only 60 had any contact with shop work of a more or less skilled nature, and that these were conducted on a far less efficient basis than the average factory. In his report Professor Myers states that "very few go out even with the beginnings of skilled occupation", and that "it is our deliberate opinon based on this study that the great majority of boys return to society worse out of adjustment than when they came."

Only 27 Per Cent Normal

Intelligence tests conducted by Prof. Guy M. Whipple, of the experimental education department, assisting Professor Myers, reported that only 27 per cent of the students were of normal intelligence, that 35 per cent were actually feeble minded and that no distinction was made between these classes. Feeble minded boys were placed many times in responsible positions, and required to do skilled work, while boys of high grade intelligence were forced to labor at the dullest routine work.

Boys were required to sit in school seats in many cases entirely too small for them. School rooms were poorly lighted and ventilated and school equipment was found woefully lacking.

Advise Many Changes

Recommendations submitted were that more use be made of motion pictures, educational films and news service as well as "suitable dramatic and comic films", and that the school days be lengthened to correspond to those of public schools. At present the average school day at the institution is three and a half hours long, as compared to the five and a half hour day in public schools.

Of the 15 teachers employed all were women, and with the exception of the superintendent none of them were trained to deal with pupils of low mentality. Their salaries were found to be much lower than those given to the average public school instructor. It was recommended that at least half of the teachers be men, and that suitable salaries be paid in order to obtain specialized instructors.

A LONGER ENGINEERING COURSE

Again comes the cry that colleges are not practical enough! This time it comes from men who are nothing if not practical, the Detroit automobile manufacturers, men who are largely self-made, men whose sheer force and ability forced them to the front in a new field. And the cry is directed against the engineering school, certainly the most practical of educational divisions.

The fault is, say the manufacturers, that the training is too technical. Too much emphasis is laid upon theory, upon abstract sciences, upon particularities which are in general the opposite of the knowledge needed in industry. The need is for men who are trained in organization, efficiency methods, production, and similar problems of factory organization. All this is based upon the claim that engineers go into executive positions, positions which are not primarily technical in aspect.

But engineering faculty men do not seem to think that the present course of study can be any less technical than it is. A certain amount of theoretical foundation is absolutely necessary — the engineer must at least be able to read intelligently upon any technical subject which may come within his experience. The present curriculum would not be improved by dropping some of these courses for others of a more general nature. The proportion of required subjects and electives is the best that can be worked out under the four year plan.

What is really needed is longer course of study. It is absurd to think that a finished engineer can be turned out in four years of work, when the medical profession, the law, the clergy, and lately, dentistry, require from five to eight years of work, especially when the advance of engineering during the last two decades is taken into consideration. As it is now the engineer spends his four years mastering the fundamentals of technical subjects, leaving the wider, broader knowledge, to a large extent, outside his field. But the more general studies are valuable, they are almost necessary for the modern engineer, and it is inevitable that they will be provided.

No one can doubt that the less scholarly engineering profession has suffered in the eyes of society because it can be mastered in a shorter length of time. The doctor, the lawyer, the clergyman, has held a much higher place in public esteem than the engineer. This is due partly to awe for a profession which requires more than half a decade in study, and partly to the broader culture of the men in these professions. Only when the engineer has a technical knowledge enhanced by a broad general comprehension of affairs, will he take a larger place in the life of the community and occupy his proper niche in the esteem of the public.

JAM THE ETHER

Many months ago — last year in fact — the University wireless was reopened. It cannot be correct operating wireless sets without aerials.

Are steeplejacks conspicuous by their absence? Or is it funds? Or is it the lack of inclination?

This is the twentieth century. Radio has an admitted field — and the University of Michigan is not so independent that it can afford to bypass this method of communication and extension. Fix the radio — and jam the ether.

OBNOXIOUS BARKERS

There come times in the lives of organizations when they find it necessary to fill the coffers of their treasuries with money solicited from the general public. Whenever the cause is a worthy one the willing public "comes across" and asks no questions. Recently, however, while our various monthly publications were offering their wares and our year book was signing up prospective purchasers, certain little things have occurred which should be checked now before they grow in size and corresponding effect.

The reference is to the methods employed by the salesmen, or barkers, of these organization in selling their wares. In general, these campus solicitors have observed the common rules of politeness and courtesy, but some there were who, when their pleas were unheeded, would follow any unwilling purchaser along the walk, pestering him with a verbal attack of nonsense, and then, if he would not buy, would hurl mocking epithets at him or pass jocular remarks about "the cheapness of some people." Such occurrences are to be regretted, for they not only bring into disfavor those solicitors who recognize the demands of general courtesy and also cast discredit upon the publications or organizations represented.

Probably these salesmen considered that it was their duty to act in this manner, and forgot themselves in their zeal and devotion to the cause for which they were working. Loyalty and service are always to be commended, but it should never be necessary to resort to extremes such as our recent obnoxious barkers have done to realize these aims.

BRING HOME A FRIEND

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving day.

Many students will eat their Thanksgiving dinner at home, with juicy turkey, and "all the trimmings". Others will eat their Thanksgiving dinner in a boarding house, or cafeteria, where they will try not to be homesick.

This is your chance to do a humanitarian act. If you are going home Thanksgiving and you think there will be room, why not invite one of these "homeless" friends to share your homecoming?

It will make him feel as though Thanksgiving day is really something to be thankful for.
