ABBOT WILL ANNOUNCE

String Ensemble, Composed Of School Of Music Students, Will Play Several Numbers

Four talks by members of the University faculty and a series of musical numbers by a string ensemble composed of students in the University School of Music, are included in the Michigan Night radio program which will be broadcast between 7, and 8 o'clock tonight. The program will be put on the air through WJR, Detroit.

Barbara H. Bartlett, professor of public health nursing, who is in charge in the problems of community and rural health nursing, has chosen as the topic of her talk "Public Health Nursing."

George Blocum, professor of ophthamology, is one of the specialists in the treatment of eyes at the University hospital, and will speak on "Some Popular Misconceptions Concerning the Eyes." Among the statements he has made on this subject is that "glasses are not primarily to make the wearer see better but to protect the eyes."

The third talk of the program will be given by Richard T. Schlosberg, professor of military science and tactics. He is stationed at the University to instruct students in the R. O. T. C. He has built and operates a short wave radio station for the University with which he is in constant touch with the University's Expeditions in Greenland, and with Commander Byrd in the Antarctic. His talk will deal with "Short Wave Stations."

In the concluding talk of the evening, Joseph E. Maddy, head of the public school music department of the University School of Music, will tell of the national high school orchestra camp held at Lake Interlochen, Michigan.

The string ensemble which is to present the musical numbers is also under the direction of Mr. Maddy.

Figures Released By Extension Department Indicate Increase Of Five Hundred Students

Extension students of the University will exceed in number the total for last year by at least 500, it is indicated by figures from the extension department. The number enrolled for second semester work will reach 900 or more it is predicted, while the total for the fall semester, three or four times the number for the spring semester, was 1,180, equalling the total of those enrolled last year, showing a steady, and recently rapid, growth.

Largest of the Detroit extension classes is one of 60 members in Governments of Continental Europe, taught by Dr. Paul M. Cuncannon. Free Lance Writing, taught by Prof. J. L. Brumm has 49. Prof. G. E. Densmore has 41 students in each of two speech classes; Prof. J. H. Muyskens has 40 in a class of Speech Improvement, and Prof. S. F. Gingerich has 38 in a class, Prose Fiction of the 19th Century.

Other classes taught in Detroit are Teaching of Science in the Junior and Senior High school, Prof. F. D. Curtis; Psychology of Industrial Management, Prof. Adelbert Ford; Theory of Aviation, Prof. Stalker, and Criminology, Prof. A. E. Wood.

Other classes are Social Psychiatry, taught by Dr. Theophile Raphael, at the Receiving hospital, Detroit; Geography of South America, by Prof. P. E. James at Grand Rapids Junior college, and Education, taught by Prof. C. O. Kyte at Monroe High school.

Vocational education classes are being taught at Detroit, in Cass Technical high school by Prof. Cleo Murtland and Prof. E. L. Hayes, the former having three classes and the latter two.

Vocational classes and any combined with the Smith-Hughes projects do not offer college credit. Of the regular extension classes which do offer credit, however, it is reported that a large number are studying only for inherent interest rather than for credit.
