FOUR SPEECHES MADE ON WEEKLY PROGRAM

Short Wave Stations, Ophthalmology, And Community Health Nursing Comprise Broadcast

MADDY LEADS ENSEMBLE

Four schools and departments of the University were represented on the weekly Michigan Night radio program which was broadcast last night through station WJR, Detroit. Besides the speeches, the School of Music string ensemble rendered several musical selections.

Lieut. Richard Schlosberg, professor of military science and tactics, spoke on the subject of "Short Wave Stations". The station which is located in the Engineering building, Lieutenant Schlosberg stated, is able to keep in good communication with the various expeditions sent out by the University for purposes of research. The University is constantly in touch with the Greenland expedition, with the Lamont astronomical observatory in South Africa, as well as with the Byrd expedition and San Salvadore. Lieutenant Schlosberg added that through the medium of short wave reception sets radio listeners in the near future will be able to tune in on programs transmitted from Berlin, Paris and Madrid with as much ease as they hear Detroit at present.

Joseph E. Maddy, head of the public school music department of the University School of Music, explained the purposes and accomplishments of the national high school orchestra camp held at Lake Interlochen, Michigan. Mr. Maddy also directed the string ensemble in its musical presentations.

At The Medical School

Prof. George Slocum discussed "Some Popular Misconceptions Concerning the Eyes". Dr. Slocum asserted that glasses are not designed primarily to improve the vision of the wearer, but to protect his eyes and to strengthen them.

Barbara H. Bartlett, professor of public health nursing, who is interested in the problems of community and rural health nursing, described methods and results to be sought after in this field.

Cosmopolitan Club To Hear Vibbert On New Student Trends

Noted Professor Will Discuss Life Of American Students In French Schools

Prof. Charles B. Vibbert, of the philosophy department, will speak on "The New Trend in International Student Life" at the initiation meeting of the Cosmopolitan club, at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in Lane hall. The meeting is open to all who are interested. All members are urged to attend.

Professor Vibbert will discuss the University of Paris, where he worked for some time. The university, which has a total enrollment of 26,000 students, has about 9,000 foreign students, including a large delegation of Americans. The university and the French government encourage students from other lands, and the government has recently given to the use of these students a large plot of ground for the building of individual dormitories.

Seniors May Compete In New Essay Contest

Seniors in the literary college are eligible to compete for a new prize of one hundred dollars for the best essay in the field of economics and sociology, according to an announcement yesterday by Prof. T. L. Sharfman, head of the economic department. A. M. Todd of Kalamazoo has donated the award.

Any subject in the two fields may be chosen by the contestants, subject to the approval of the committee in charge consisting of Professors Carter Goodrich, Lowell J. Carr, and Charles F. Remer.

New Two Cent Stamp Not To Be Sold Here

The new two cent stamp commemorating the capture of Fort Vincennes by George Rogers Clarke will not be available at the Ann Arbor post office according to an announcement made yesterday by Postmaster Philip C. Pack.

The new issue, which is printed in red and black, is said to be one of the most attractive ever put out by the post office. It shows the surrender of the Fort to George Rogers Clarke.

SCREEN REFLECTIONS

Timberg Scores!

Herman Timberg continues his dispensation of variety entertainment at the Michigan. According to the blushing acquiescence of the 17 point type advertisements the show is disparate, dissimilar, divergent, nonidentical, unmatched, new, unique, novel original, and in no way comparable to the bill which preceded it. We do not desire to go on record as concurring in this opinion, but we have no rabid objection to admitting that the M. Timberg's offering proved to be amiable, and at moments captivating.

One Barbara Blair, a crooner of melodies, melodies of sorts, through astute manipulation of her voice managed to produce a presence a monotonania, in the audience which at times threatened to stop the show. Fortunately for the show, for the Mlle. Blair, and for the audience, the embryonic uprising did not flower into maturity. All of which leads us to advise that if you happen to be in the need of stimulation then go to the Michigan.

The idea (if any) lurking in the recesses of the Timberg cerebral cavity seemed to be travesty on college life. At least that is the impression we gathered from the wide trousers, the inane expressions, and the polysyllabic phrasing accompanying various remarks which questioned the value of higher education.

The less said about the movie the greater favor will we curry with the Michigan management. It is one of the more outstanding reasons why the moving picture industry has fallen into disrepute. Taking all the evidence into consideration, i. e. the price of admission, the unquestionably large Timberg emolument, and the price of movies, we would be led to believe that the powers of the Michigan box office did not feel justified in making a huge expenditure on the celluloid end of the bill. They would have done better to leave it out altogether.

Not So Good

If you want proof that the talking pictures die a week from next Sunday at the Wuerth are bound to be better entertainment than many of the silent films, go down and see "Avalanche" today or tomorrow at the Wuerth. It's a good picture—to stay away from.

Zane Grey must be getting pretty bad in his old age for this latest effort of his hasn't got enough excitement to keep you awake. Jack Holt, Barbara Kent ("Forgotten Faces"), and Doris Dawson take part in this feeble plot which has a strong resemblance to "The Barker."

Movietone and Vitaphone installation is going on rapidly at the downtown theater and will be in readiness for opening on March 24. The first feature under the new regime has not yet been announced.

Near The Border

Mr. Fox's Detroit Fox has an all-talker coming tomorrow that gives promise of being one of the best produced to date. It's title . . . shhh! . . . is "Speakeasy" and the locale is dear old New York. Incidentally, the weekly stage presentations at the Fox are the most pretentious and lavish we've ever come across.

When his Lordship the Bishop asked his guest how he enjoyed the breakfast egg, that timid—but always truthful—young curate replied: "Parts of it were excellent, sir!"

Now isn't that just like saying that such-and-such a cigarette is mild? Mildness in tobacco is not to be despised, but is it the be plus ultra, the summum bonum, the . . . in plain English, is that all you ask from your cigarette? We think not.

Take Chesterfield's mildness for granted, and get the full relish of its rich, real taste under your tongue. That's its difference from the common run—all the difference between plus and minus. Chesterfields are mild . . . and yet they satisfy.
