Council Grants Company Permit To Consolidate Present Lines Into Two

Motor bus lines in Ann Arbor will be consolidated into two main routes after March 5, the Eastern Michigan Motorbus Company announced yesterday. Application for the change was made to the Common Council Monday night by the Detroit Trust Company, receivers for the lines, and was unanimously approved.

Route one is as follows: Packard — Burns Park and Hospital — via Granger—Lincoln Ave., Morton Ave., Packard St., Granger Ave., Olivia Ave., Wells St., Prospect St., East University Ave., Packard St., State St., William St., Main St., Catherine St., Detroit St., State St., Kingsley St., Insalls St., Ann St., Observatory St., Volland St., and return over the same route.

Route two is as follows: Norway road, Austin Ave., Washtenaw Ave., Cambridge Road, Lincoln Ave., Hill St., Church St., N. University Ave., Hill St., Church St., N. University Ave., State St., Washington St., Ferdinand Blvd., Jackson Ave., Warden Ave., Dexter Ave., except the fact that the route via Jackson Ave. forms a loop at the end of the line.

The company intends to put into operation four new buses and to allow the purchase of two fares for 15 cents. There will be no runs Sunday, it was announced, unless the people request transportation to the various churches.

Snow Flurry Compared To Summer Storm

The sudden snow flurry which blew up a few minutes after 1 a. m. Tuesday morning, and for about 10 minutes had the intensity of a blizzard, was really nothing unusual, according to Prof. Heber D. Curtis, of the University Observatory. "Snow flurries were predicted," he said, "and this one was similar to a summer storm."

The whole period of snow fell lasted no longer than about 20 minutes, and in that time approximately an inch of snow fell. During the first 10 minutes it came down with such fury that objects could not be seen 100 feet away. Only a few minutes before the sky was apparently cloudless and perfectly blue, although it had turned much colder than it had been earlier in the night.

Haisley Says Schools Need Appropriation

sources were mentioned as being used by other states as major sources of revenue.

The school appropriation from the mill tax was said to be decidedly insufficient. In Ann Arbor at least from $75,000 to $100,000 will have to be cut from the school budget, even assuming that some additional state aid will be forthcoming, Mr. Haisley said.

"Schools of Michigan are faced with the necessity of reducing service," Mr. Haisley continued. The operating expenses will have to be cut to an irreducible minimum and salary cutting of teachers will follow, he declared.

During the last three years the budget of Ann Arbor schools has been cut 24 per cent, bringing it below the level of the budget for 1922, it was declared. This reduction is typical of conditions throughout the state, Mr. Haisley said.

A discussion as to the curtailment of service in Ann Arbor is planned for the next meeting of the school board March 8. The board must determine just where and what services are to be eliminated," Superintendent Haisley declared.

Fewer Students Dismissed For Failure To Work

used in February, 1932, 47 students continued in school, of which some were dropped in June, whereas those who failed after reinstatement last year ordinarily would have been on withdrawal lists at the present time.

"A major cause, however," declared Dean Effinger, "for the comparatively low number of students now on home lists is the current business depression." He believes that countless students have been made to realize their responsibility to gain as much as possible for their time spent in school, and consequently scholastic work has improved.

Dean Effinger praised the work of Prof. Russel C. Hussey and Prof. Lewis G. VanderVelde, assistants to the dean of the literary college, who were appointed student advisors for all students last year. "Their advice has doubtlessly helped numerous students improve their scholastic work," he said.

Finally, Dean Effinger pointed out that a decrease in the number of students enrolled in the University this year would by the law of perchance reduce the number of students who would drop out.

States Will Not Ratify Repeal, Reed Declares

that a similar movement had been responsible for the ratification of the eighteenth amendment. It would be impossible to explain its acceptance by states so wet as Pennsylvania and New York in any other way, he said.

The convention method of consideration which Congress has stipulated for the proposed repeal amendment, Professor Reed pointed out, will obviously slow up the process. This, he prophesied, will dispel the tendency to mob-action, cause the states on the borderline between being wet and dry to act negatively instead of positively, and consequently prevent the ratification of the amendment within the time limit of seven years.

S. C. A. FORUM

The first of the Student Christian Forums for the second semester will be held at 4:15 p. m. tomorrow in Natural Science Auditorium. Prof. George E. Carrothers of the School of Education will speak on "Taxation Problems As Seen By The Layman."

Exhibit Drawings And Models Of Latest Automobile Designs

The exhibition of modern automobile designs which was put on display in the large third floor exhibition room of the Architecture Building last week has been well attended, Prof. Emil Lorch of the architecture college stated yesterday. It will continue until the last of the week.

The exhibition features drawings and watercolor pictures of automobile body designs contributed by the Packard Motor Company, the Chrysler Corporation, the Hudson Motor Company, and the Ford and Lincoln Automobile Companies, as well as small wood models showing the effect of wind resistance. The models were made by Prof. W. E. Lay of the mechanical engineering department after much research. Diagrams and other data show the results of Professor Lay's experiments.

Streamlining is the dominent characteristic of all drawings of the different models. Outstanding is a suggested design for the Packard Motor car, which applies the laws for the lowering of wind resistance to such an extent as to make the automobile similar to a bullet. It is slated backward, has a tapering body, elongated hub caps, rear wheels concealed within the fender, slightly peaked top, and running boards of such shape as to assist in the cleavage of air. Even the door handles and hinges, as well as the bumpers and body border design, are streamlined.

Interior views of the different types of autos are also displayed. Window levers, gear shift knob, door knobs, and even the dashboard, as much as possible, carries out this idea of reduced wind resistance.

The exhibit was brought here under the auspices of the Detroit Society of Arts and Craft, and the automobile companies named above. It is open to the public from 1 to 5 p. m. daily and will close Saturday.

It Takes Personality To Get Jobs, Engineer Says

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 21—If students are planning on getting a job after graduating from college now is the time to start cultivating a personality, according to T. C. McNabb, chief engineer of construction of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. "An education is of little use if the job hunter cannot show his prospective employer the goods," Mr. McNabb said, speaking on "How To Get A Job" before a luncheon club at McGill University. He further pointed out that a pleasing personality and not too much knowledge go farther than a lot of knowledge and no personality.

Living Costs Down At West Virginia University

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Feb. 21.—Living costs have greatly decreased at the University of West Virginia in the last three years, according to figures from the office of the dean of men.

The price of a week's board has been reduced from a minimum of $7 in 1929 to $4 at present. Room rent has decreased even more and many rooms are available for a dollar a week per student. The decrease has enabled many students whose finances are limited to continue in college, with the result that enrollment has not declined.
